

LIES OF BRIAN

Brian Wendell Morton has a hard time telling the truth.

But unlike your accountant, your lawyer or possibly your congressman, that's Brian's job. The 20th century author Elbert Hubbard said, "I like magicians, because they're honest men. They tell you they're going to fool you, and then they proceed to do it." And as a magician par excellence, Brian certainly will.

Brian has woven together many honest pursuits in his career: award-winning radio journalist, congressional press secretary, newspaper columnist and White House staffer. All these real-life endeavors have left Brian with equivalent of a master's degree in the art and science of deception.

Brian combines the genteel manner of a diplomat and the sleight-of-hand skills of a casino card shark to make his magic devastating and entertaining. Whether reading minds and transporting objects or making playing cards appear in the unlikeliest of places, Brian's magic will make you question the truth!

The Lies of Brian combines audience interaction, amusing byplay and a touch of the history of conjuring to ensure that, as Brian says, "everyone gets a little mystery in their lives." Brian's full stage show is part carny con man and part wry humor that never insults an audience or their intelligence. He can float audience members in the air or saw them in two – and leave them both dazzled and deceived.

Combined with a healthy dollop of audience participation, The Lies of Brian will make people sit up and take notice, whether it is on a stage or inches away where the close-up miracles take place right in a spectator's hands!

For an honest talk about your entertainment needs, e-mail him at bwm@liesofbrian.com or call him at 410-234-1439. He'll tell you the truth.

That is, until the show starts.
